Notes:
* Connecticut operates a single Administrative Service Organization for physical health, which is the sole Contractor and provider of services in the state, and thus, their model contract does not provide for some of the network requirements that would be found in typical managed care contracts.
 Maryland’s boilerplate contract language is based heavily on and structured upon MD’s regulations regarding managed care; therefore the footnotes below reflect regulatory citations.
* Women’s Preventive Health requirements refer to the ACA’s requirement that women be offered coverage for at least one annual well-woman visit that women can use to obtain all of the preventive services that are recommended, including prenatal care. These services may, but are not required to, be performed by an OB/GYN. Thus, the well-women preventive services are categorized separately from network OB/GYN standards.
* This state had only published an RFP for its contracts so the chart reflects provisions of the RFP instead of actual contract language.

All data in the footnotes is actual boilerplate language from the contracts and RFPs unless otherwise noted.
