

Adults Insured All Year with Medicaid or Private Coverage Were Significantly More Likely to Have a Regular Source of Care and Rate Their Health Care Highly Compared with Uninsured Adults

Percent adults ages 19–64

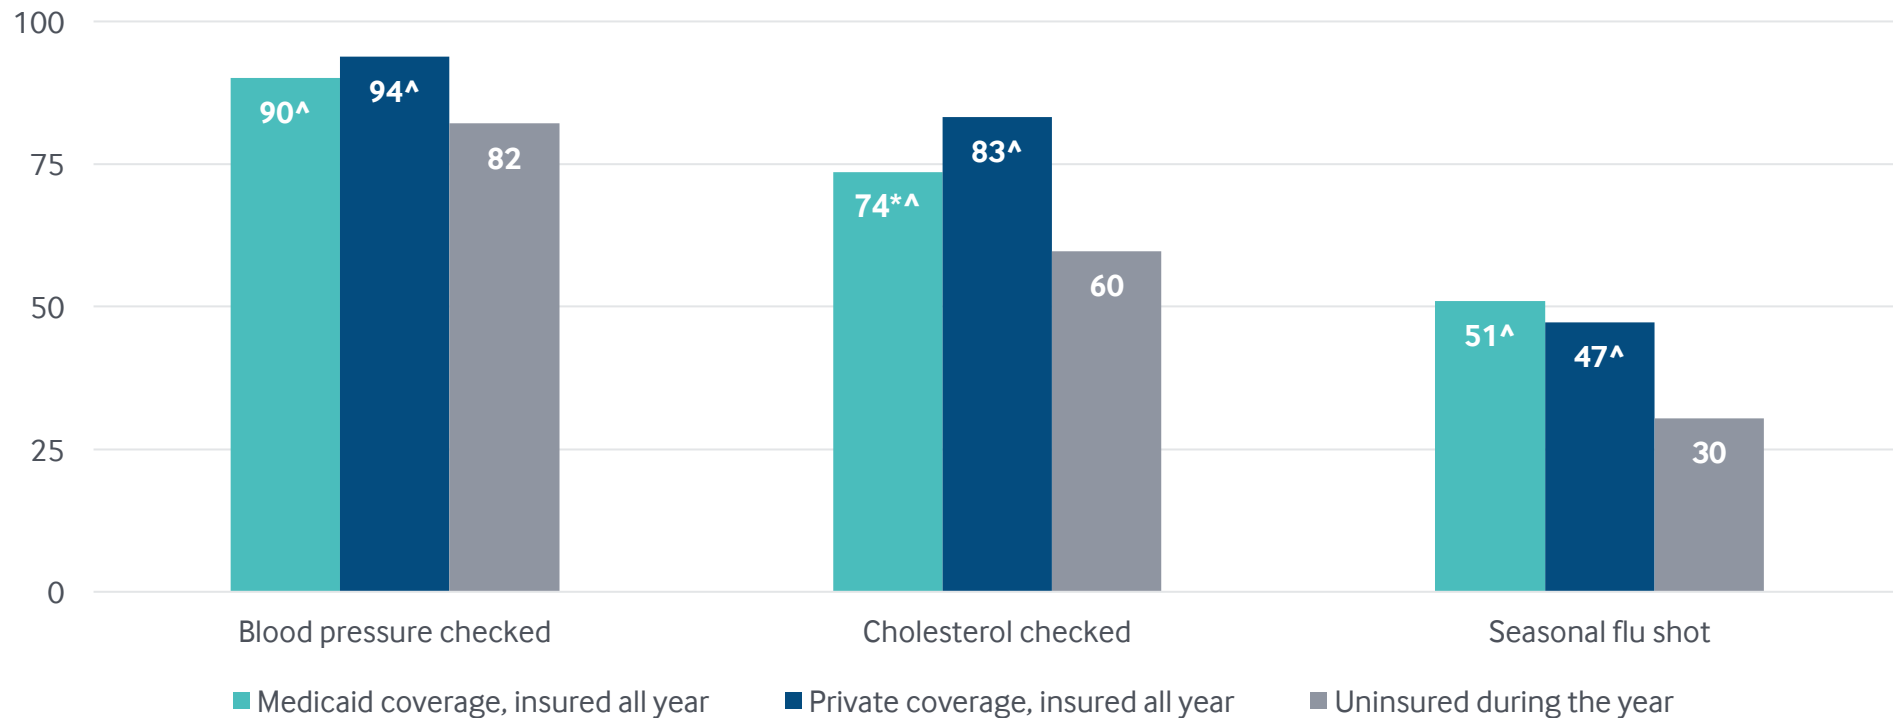

Notes: “Uninsured during the year” includes respondents who were uninsured at the time of the survey or had a gap in coverage during the past 12 months. Private coverage includes adults who were enrolled in either employer plans, marketplace plans, or plans purchased directly off of the marketplaces. [^] Difference is statistically significant from those who were uninsured during the year (p≤0.05). Percentages were adjusted for age, race, sex, health status, and income. * Excludes those who had not received health care in past 12 months.

Data: The Commonwealth Fund Biennial Health Insurance Survey (2016).

Adults Insured All Year with Medicaid or Private Coverage Reported Using Preventive Care Services at Significantly Higher Rates Than Adults Uninsured During the Year

Percent adults ages 19–64

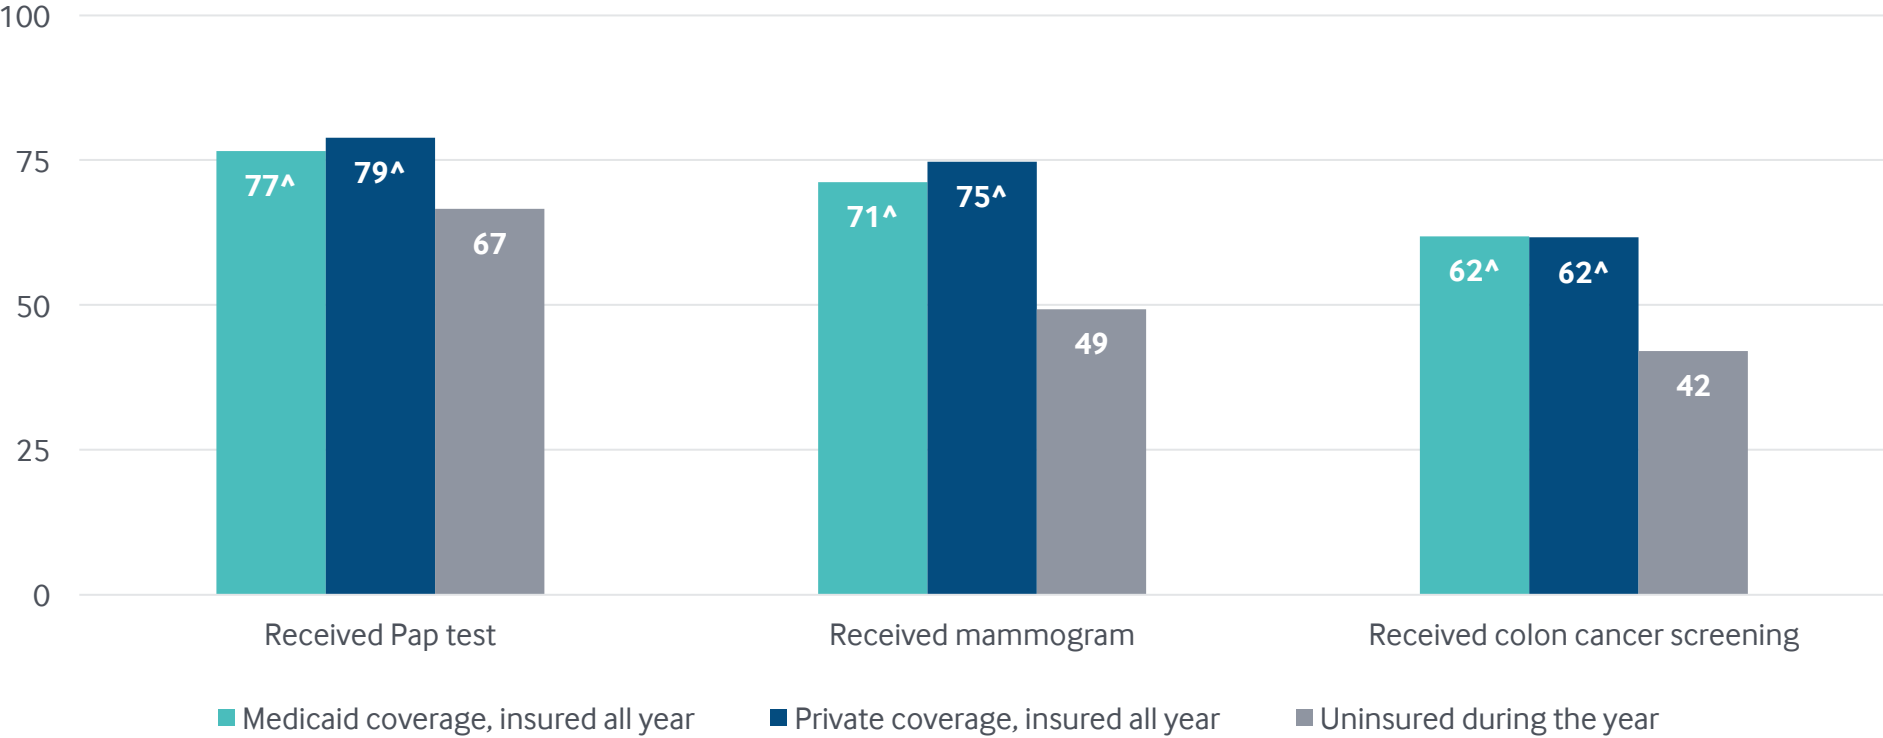

Notes: “Uninsured during the year” includes respondents who were uninsured at the time of the survey or had a gap in coverage during the past 12 months. Private coverage includes adults who were enrolled in either employer plans, marketplace plans, or plans purchased directly off of the marketplaces. Seasonal flu shot in past 12 months; blood pressure checked in past two years (in past year if has hypertension or high blood pressure); cholesterol checked in past five years (in past year if has hypertension, heart disease, or high cholesterol). [^] Difference is statistically significant from those who were uninsured during the year ($p \leq 0.05$). ^{*} Difference is statistically significant from those with private coverage who were insured all year ($p \leq 0.05$). Percentages were adjusted for age, race, sex, health status, and income.

Data: The Commonwealth Fund Biennial Health Insurance Survey (2016).

Adults Insured All Year with Medicaid or Private Coverage Reported Getting Cancer Screening Tests at Significantly Higher Rates Than Adults Uninsured During the Year

Percent adults ages 19–64

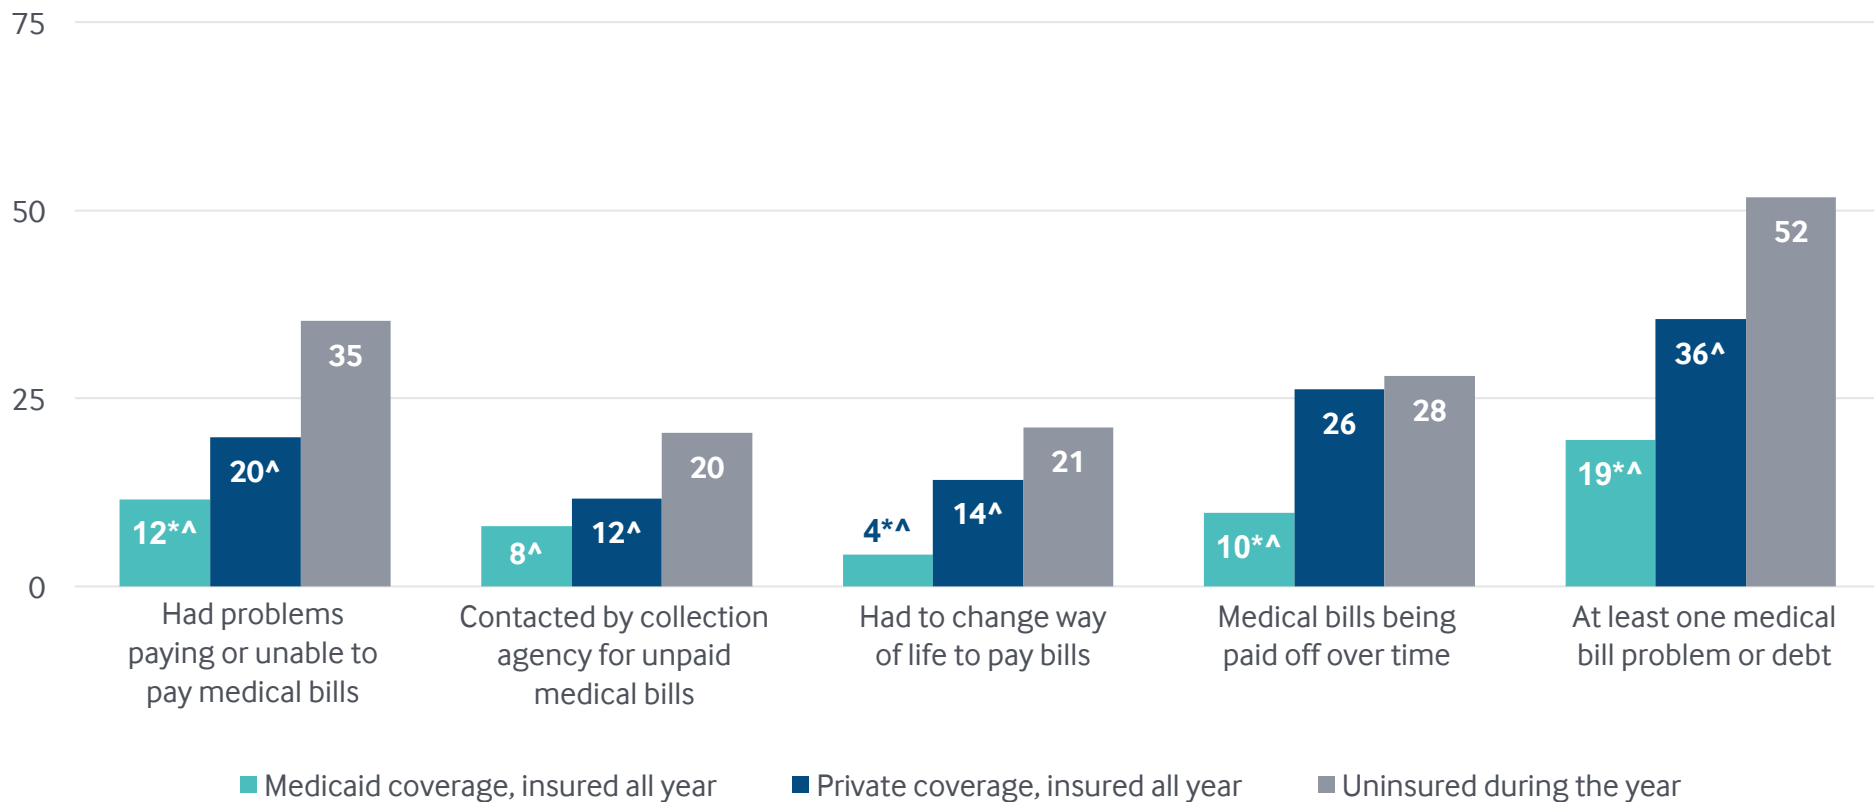

Notes: "Uninsured during the year" includes respondents who were uninsured at the time of the survey or had a gap in coverage during the past 12 months. Private coverage includes adults who were enrolled in either employer plans, marketplace plans, or plans purchased directly off of the marketplaces. Pap test in past three years for females ages 21–64; mammogram in past two years for females ages 40–64; and colon cancer screening in past five years for adults ages 50–64. [^] Difference is statistically significant from those who were uninsured during the year ($p \leq 0.05$). * Difference is statistically significant from those with private coverage who were insured all year ($p \leq 0.05$). Percentages were adjusted for age, race, sex, health status, and income.

Data: The Commonwealth Fund Biennial Health Insurance Survey (2016).

Adults Insured All Year with Medicaid Coverage Reported Lower Rates of Medical Bill Problems Than Adults with Private Coverage and Those Uninsured During the Year

Percent adults ages 19–64

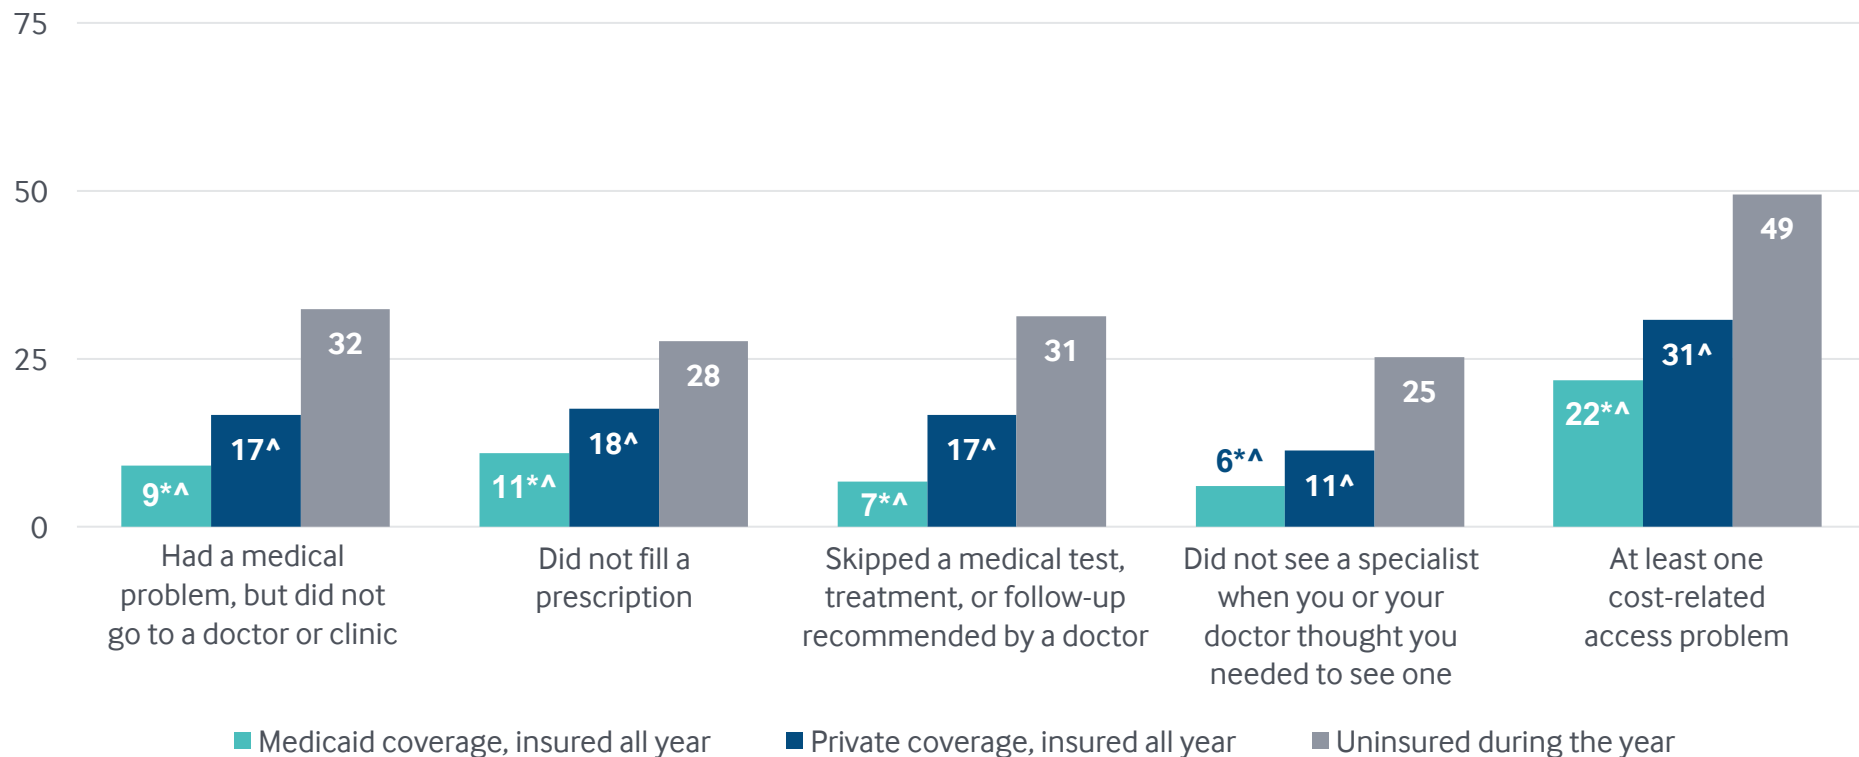

Notes: “Uninsured during the year” includes respondents who were uninsured at the time of the survey or had a gap in coverage during the past 12 months. Private coverage includes adults who were enrolled in either employer plans, marketplace plans, or plans purchased directly off of the marketplaces. ^ Difference is statistically significant from those who were uninsured during the year ($p \leq 0.05$). * Difference is statistically significant from those with private coverage who were insured all year ($p \leq 0.05$). Percentages were adjusted for age, race, sex, health status, and income.

Data: The Commonwealth Fund Biennial Health Insurance Survey (2016).

Adults Insured All Year with Medicaid Coverage Reported Lower Rates of Cost-Related Access Problems Than Adults with Private Coverage and Those Uninsured During the Year

Percent adults ages 19–64

Notes: “Uninsured during the year” includes respondents who were uninsured at the time of the survey or had a gap in coverage during the past 12 months. Private coverage includes adults who were enrolled in either employer plans, marketplace plans, or plans purchased directly off of the marketplaces. [^] Difference is statistically significant from those who were uninsured during the year (p≤0.05). ^{*} Difference is statistically significant from those with private coverage who were insured all year (p≤0.05). Percentages were adjusted for age, race, sex, health status, and income.

Data: The Commonwealth Fund Biennial Health Insurance Survey (2016).