Q89B Some people say that to help pay for the cost of health insurance for all Americans, employers should either provide health insurance to their employees or contribute to a fund that would help cover workers without health insurance. Others say that employers should not have to provide or contribute. Which comes closer to your opinion?

- 1 Employers should either provide health insurance or contribute to a fund
- 2 Employers should not have to provide or contribute

Q89C To keep health care affordable for families, some policy makers believe that families should not have to pay more than a certain percent of their income each year on health care and insurance costs and that employers or the government should cover costs above that amount. What do you think is a reasonable amount for families to pay for their own health care?

(READ)

- 1 Limit family contributions to less than 5 percent of family incomes, that is, $2,000 for a family earning $40,000 a year
- 2 Limit family contributions to less than 10 percent of family income, that is, $4,000 for a family earning $40,000 a year
- 3 No limits should be placed on what families have to pay
- 4 Everything should be covered by insurance

Q90 The federal income tax cuts of the last four years amount to an estimated loss of tax revenue of $170 to $200 billion per year through 2010. Guaranteeing health insurance security for all Americans would cost about half of that amount annually. Would you favor or oppose rolling back the federal tax cuts and using the revenue to help guarantee health insurance security for everyone?

Q91 The tax cuts in recent years are also scheduled to eliminate the estate tax on wealthy families. In 2006, the estate tax applies to estates of more than $2 million. Keeping the estate tax amounts to about $70 billion in revenues each year which could help support long term care for the elderly. Would you favor or oppose keeping the estate tax and using the revenues for long term care for the elderly?
